

The John Cardinal Cody Chair and the Department of Theology of Andrew Radde-Gallwitz, winner of the Templeton Award for Theological Promise

Andrew Radde-Gallwitz
Loyola University Chicago
“Creed as Apology:
The Pneumatological Letters of Basil
Caesarea and Gregory of Nyssa

For more information, contact Prof. Edmondo Lepore at lepore@luc.edu 773-5082363
Refreshments will be provided.

Andrew Radde-Gallwitz has taught historical theology at Loyola University Chicago since 2007. His book Basil of Caesarea, Gregory of Nyssa, and the Transformation of Divine Simplicity is a Templeton Award for Theological Promise winner (2011). In his research, he focuses on the emergence of Christian beliefs and practices in late antiquity, with particular focus on the origins of the doctrine of the Trinity.

Mark DeCologliano teaches historical theology at the University of St. Thomas - Minnesota. His publications include